

Weymouth North Post Office/Library

Circa 1908 Registered 2022

The Weymouth North post office was constructed in 1908 as a service to the residents of the bustling community of Weymouth North. The post office was a daily hub for news and conversation for young and old. The post office was the harbor for many memories. Christmas was a special time with cards and letters and gifts anticipated for the Holidays. Mail could be deposited during off hours by a mail slot opening in the door and a safe box inside that still exists. The office had several post mistresses over the years but Miss Jessie Falvay, known simply as Miss Jessie, is remembered very fondly. She was a fixture in the community and shortly after her retirement in 1965 the Post Office closed. The following year the Post Office was given to the Weymouth Garden Club and they made it into a community library and it remained a library until 1978. In 2007 the Weymouth Waterfront Development Association became custodians of the building. They plan on opening the building as an interpretive center, focused on the special marsh environment that surrounds the property and the history of this special place.
